SAFETY FIRST

"A H, Spring . . . tre is la," sang Chuck happily as he dropped into the hammock on Susie Callen's lawn. "This is the time of the year that I love best . . . only a few more weeks of school, and then sweet vacation time comes around . . . no books, no teachers, no being scooped up in a stuffy classroom . . . just the air and me . . . and nothing else to do but enjoy my bliss."

"Hmmp," Susie snorted, "that's all you can think about when Spring comes around. Just like a boy."

"And what's wrong with that . . . you want I should dance around a maypole in a white dress and join a nature study class?" Chuck asked.

"Oh, don't be a dope, Chuck," laughed Susie, wrapping a strand of her soft blonde hair around her finger thoughtfully. "What I mean to say is, well, every Spring we think about getting out of school, and rushing into Summer, so we can do what? Absolutely nothing. We loaf, we hang around Bill's and down cokes, we spend hours just walking back and forth to each other's houses . . . but nothing CONSTRUCTIVE!"

Chuck sat up straight in the hammock suddenly and almost toppled out in his excitement. "CONSTRUCTIVE? Heck, who wants to do anything constructive in the Spring and Summer? It's too nice to work."

Susie took a piece of young grass from between her lips and surveyed it carefully as she talked. "Of course I realize that you boys are too lazy to do any work at this time of the year," she said, ignoring the cold glances being given her, "but it's possible to do something constructive without working at it."

"You're daffy, Susie. There ain't no such animal . . ." Chuck scoffed.

Susie continued without bothering to answer Chuck. "For instance, we could have a play . . . and raise funds for a charity. That wouldn't be work . . . it would be fun."

"FUN! If you think any of the guys and girls are going to spend weeks learning parts, and call it fun, you're off the track."

Susie stopped a moment to scowl, then added, "Well, maybe you're right . . . for once . . . but there must be something else. Let's see . . . we could have a dance . . . and the funds can go for new baseball uniforms for the school team."

Susie thought she detected a gleam of interest in Chuck's eyes, but he soon broke the bubble with, "Well, maybe . . . the team needs uniforms like mad, but . . . it's too warm to dance in the summer. And we'd have to put up decorations . . . nope, that's out. Think again, Miss Idea."

Quite suddenly, Susie leapt up from the grass where she had been sitting. "Chuck . . . I HAVE it . . . listen! Remember the talk we had in the Auditorium today about the Safety

First Campaign being conducted next week in our community? Well, we could have an outing. We could meet somewhere near Blue Lake, have a picnic, roast weiners and things, and go swimming, too . . ."

She sighed with relief when Chuck broke out in a broad, agreeable smile. Chuck said, "Hey . . . that's great. We could make the theme of the outing 'Safety First'. We'll invite all the kids in town to participate, and it'll give great publicity to the Safety campaign."

"Right," Susie smiled, "and it'll be just plain FUN, and no work."

"Let's get started down to Bill's and tell the gang about it, so we can start making plans. Cmon, Susie."

Susie and Chuck ran all the way to Bill's, and a noisy, busy afternoon was spent at the ice-cream parlor, making plans for the "Safety First" outing.

The next Saturday morning was warm and the sun shone brightly. This was the morning of the outing. Long before ten o'clock, there were merry sounds coming from the shores of Blue Lake, just a few miles out of town.

There were about thirty boys and girls having a wonderful time getting out of cars, unpacking lunches, looking for wood for a fire, and some of the others were busy fastening a "Safety First Outing" sign to a nearby tree.

"There," said Susie, "That looks just fine. Now that that's done, we can get on with our outing. I think the water looks just luscious, don't you, kids?"

She looked around for Chuck, but he wasn't standing near. Susie gasped when she saw Chuck poised on a tree stump alongside the lake, ready to dive in.

Susie ran over to him. "CHUCK . . . for goodness sakes, get off there . . . remember the theme of this outing is Safety First, and you're sure setting a bad example. First you've got to test the water at this point and see if it's deep enough to dive into."

"Oh, fiddles, Susie," Chuck groaned, "I've dived off this stump a hundre dtimes before, stump a hundred times before. I KNOW it's deep enough."

"Nevertheless, remember our theme . . . and TEST the water first," Susie scolded. And in less than a minute, thirty boys and girls were splashing in Blue Lake.

"Hey look at me," someone was shouting. Rose Wilson was swimming far ahead of the others, heading for the middle of the lake.

"Rose, you come back here," Susie shouted to her friend. "Safety First, remember."

Rose stopped swimming and began to tread, calling back, "What do you mean . . . I can swim."

Chuck answered, "Sure you can, but you're not any more terrific than any of us here, and none of us are champs . . . there is safety in numbers, and we're all coming with you . . . com'n, gang."

After they had been splashing around the water for some time, someone suggested it was time for lunch, and thirty hungry bodies headed for the shore.

"I'm going to lie in the sun and bake," Susie announced. Then as if she had remembered something suddenly, she said, "OH . . . GOODNESS . . . I MIGHT GET A TERRIBLE SUNBURN . . . Everbody, put on some of the suntan lotion I brought . . . this is our first day out in the sun, and we've got to watch that we don't overdo it." Susie paid no heed to the groans she heard, but supplied everyone with a small bottle of oil.

"I'm still hungry," Chuck wailed. "When do we eat?"

"Not until we get the fire down low enough so we don't get burned sitting about it. We'll wait till the wood is just smoldering, and roast the mickies and weiners that way, as a safety measure. And remember, kids, make sure the weiners are well done before you eat them . . . no stomach aches if I can help it. Dig in, kids!" Susie said.

A half an hour later, the crowd had had their fill of weiners and toasted marshmallows, and started to get restless again.

"How about some games . . . maybe a baseball game . . . the girls against the boys . . ." Hal Peters suggested.

"Great," Chuck agreed, "but first, let's not forget to cover the fire with plenty of dirt . . . Safety First . . . and that's one of the biggest and best rules."

As the gang began to choose teams, Chuck and Susie stood on the sidelines, pretty proud of this Safety outing.

"I think you really had a swell idea about this outing, Susie," Chuck smiled, "but now I'm worn out. It wasn't work, like you said, but just plain fun, and now I'm winded. How about a walk, Susie?"

"Well, okay . . . but I just hope these kids observe safety first rules, and no one gets hurt let's go!"

When they had walked only a short way down a side road, they stopped. "Do you see what I see, Chuck?" Susie said. "Look . . . a beautiful, delicious berry patch."

"And what could be safer? No one could own it all the way out here" Chuck answered. "Let's get over there."

They picked berries, and ate them until they were stuffed. All the way home they hardly talked, they were so full. When the car dropped them off at their homes, they hobbled into their rooms.

At about ten o'clock, the phone rang in Susie's house. She lifted the receiver with difficulty and said, "Hello . . . oh, Chuck . . . what are you doing calling at this hour? What? The doctor? You, too? Yep, Dr. Forbes was just here . . . That was a fine thing for us to do on a safety first outing . . . how could we ever forget that we're both allergic to berries . . . and I'll bet you a dollar I've got more HIVES than you have!"

The Lincoln Institute of Practical Nursing

Certificate
This certifies that the following named person has successfully completed the course of instruction in Practical Nursing as required by the State of California and is qualified to practice as a Practical Nurse in the State of California.

Demand far exceeds supply—Work is steady in good times or bad—Offers opportunities for travel, fine social contacts, luxurious living. Win respect and honor in this humane profession!

The acute shortage of nurses has created a national emergency. That is why Practical Nurses—who can be trained in 12 weeks of interesting home study—are demanded more and more in hospitals and in homes of convalescents all over the country.

No months or years of apprenticeship are needed. You don't start as a beginner at low pay. You don't need a high-school education to study and graduate at home, through the Lincoln School of Practical Nursing. In your own home, in spare time—without giving up your present job—you can train for your first well-paid duties as a Practical Nurse. Within 12 short weeks you can be ready to enjoy the security and good income; the social advantages; luxurious living in homes of well-to-do people; and opportunities for travel that make Practical Nursing such a wonderful profession for women of all ages.

You can easily find out all about Practical Nursing without investing any money. Simply fill out and mail the coupon below (or a postcard) for a free copy of Lincoln's fascinating 16-page book, "Careers in Nursing." Read about all the things you will learn—how easily you will absorb the training. See the wonderful opportunities open to you. Contrast the life of a nurse with that of any other profession open to women. Then see how this can be yours at an average fee of only $1.74 per lesson. Hundreds of stenographers, office clerks, factory workers and maids have given up their "blind alley" drudgery to embrace the respected profession of Practical Nursing. Thus they have gained increased pay, steady work, and opportunities for contacts with interesting people of wealth and position, on a level of equality and respect. You certainly can do the same!

Send your name today. There is no charge, now or ever, for this interesting book. It is yours free, and postage prepaid. No salesman will call to bother you. Read it in the quiet of your own home. Then decide whether the romance of nursing appeals more to you than the drudgery of ordinary work. Mail the coupon today. This one little step may be the most important you've ever taken.

Shortage of Nurses Increases in U. S.

Washington—Medical men say the present shortage of nurses in this country is almost a national emergency. There will not be enough nurses to meet the demand until at least 1973.
